Photo : AP For the first time, we are seeing a political party in a major U.S. election campaign acknowledge that voting rights have been violated in the United States. On Saturday, the Democratic Party adopted a platform that explicitly mentions and condemns voter suppression, and goes so far as to call for a commission to develop a plan to repair the damage done to the voting rights of people of color and the poor in the United States. The platform draft has been in the works for a while—but this was the first time that all the Democratic candidates for president have signed on to it. The Democratic Party is calling this a historic moment, saying it will be the first time since 1944 that all of the major parties in a presidential election have put voting rights into their platform.
