softwareQ: C# - Implementing multiple webservice methods with same signature

I'm looking for a way to implement multiple methods with the same signature, in order to allow for the creation of a list of methods that will be sent as a single request. For example, I have a webService with a method [WebMethod] public byte[] GetSample(string stringToBePassed) I want to have a GetSample1(string stringToBePassed) and GetSample2(string stringToBePassed) The intent is to group similar methods in order to ease the development process, so that I only have to write 2 methods and not 10. How is this done in C#, or is this the wrong approach and there are better methods to accomplish this? A: This is possible if you are using the right tool for the job. If you are developing a web service, WCF is the right solution. You can use the DataContractSerializer to make this easier. A: A call to a WebMethod will look like this:

[WebMethod(Description = "Do this and return the result")] public string DoThisAndReturn(string param1, int param2) { return string.Format("{0} has {1} as it's {2}.", param1, param2, param1 + param2); }

No, the signature is the method name, its parameter types, and the return type (in this case, the name, but you can have an array or anything). The method name is just a string. The description is optional; the Framework has defaults. A: Although this may be overkill for this particular situation, ASP.NET Web API offers a great framework for something like this. At least 18 people have been killed and many more wounded in an attack in a busy Cairo shopping mall during the holy Muslim fasting month of Ramadan. Cairo: At least 18 people have been killed and many more wounded in an attack in a busy Cairo shopping mall during the holy Muslim fasting month of Ramadan. "Twelve security officers, three
