I have a polygon that was generated by a loop in the application. I am now trying to calculate the area of the polygon in the database. I tried to use the STArea() function which is documented on MSDN. This doesn't work and when I added some integer values to the function, the results were all negative. I then tried STArea(STGeomFromText('POLYGON(...)' which fails with "the number of arguments to STArea must be 3 or 5, not 1". Does anyone know how I can calculate the area of this polygon? A: You need to specify what type of geometry is involved and then only STArea() will work - e.g. STArea(geometry) If you want to get the area of an entire SQL Server spatial function then you will need to use the STAsText() function. Here is the documentation on that: I would love a codename. I think thats whats needed for this mod to be a success. Once there is a codename it will give you a point of reference and you can build your game from it. Currently it seems like its more of a thing for you to work on, so no one really knows what you are working on. @Justine: I don't believe it to be so. Rather than for people to simply ask questions and follow updates, I've tried to find a way to include links in my posts to explain the game and the technical and logical changes I made. Not a single word has been said by any modder here about what they are doing, and I've been hard pressed to do so because
