Halotea Lite is a free atmospheric sound generator that can play and pause music as well as control the volume, make changes to the settings and view and play a list of sounds. With its playlists and audiovisual features, it can act as a relaxing relaxation tool. It plays high quality sounds and lets you control each and every element of the sound with a dozen of features. You can create and manage playlists with a timer, play with various settings for each sound, select one from a list or import your own sample files and record the sounds. New with this version is an enhanced audio player. In addition to playing, pausing and skipping tracks, there are various controls to quickly manage the options (playlist, volume, equalizer and more) in just a few clicks. You can now import new presets and create new ones from existing samples or import your own MP3, M4A, OGG, FLAC and other formats sounds. Once you're done, it's possible to export them to be saved in different folders with a customizable name. Key features: • Create and manage playlists • Load and manage sound files in various formats • Import your own sounds • Play your sounds with a timer • Customize the settings for each sound • Use the built-in audio player • Create and manage the settings and presets • Share your sound via social networks • Audio player that can play and pause music and control the volume • Access the main window from the systray by dragging the minimized control from the tray • Systray integration Halotea Lite Requirements: • Windows 7, 8, 8.1 or 10 (32-bit or 64-bit) • 1.4 GB RAM (2 GB recommended) • Hardware Acceleration for Windows, DirectX and OpenGL. Re: Halotea Lite I was reading up on this one a little bit, and it seems that the free version that is available does not have some of the same features as the pro version. There is no looping (you must specify each sound), no 'Jungle' preset category, etc. There are no sound effects in the pro version, either. I guess the only benefit that I can see on the pro version is that you can create your own presets and themes. That would be a big time saver for me, as I can tweak several presets like 'Jungle' or 'Cave
