Thirty-nine male alcoholics, half of whom had been hospitalized for detoxification, were hospitalized and compared with a matched control group of males who had no history of alcohol abuse. The results were as follows: Alcoholics had statistically higher serum total cholesterol levels and significantly lower levels of high-density lipoprotein cholesterol than nonalcoholics. They had about twice the normal serum cholesterol level on the day of their first hospital admission. Alcoholics were treated with an abstinence-oriented approach which included prolonged hospitalization and alcohol counseling, including dietary instruction and behavioral modification. Prior to discharge, the alcoholics were again hospitalized and, two weeks later, were tested. The treatment program was well tolerated, and only two of the 39 alcoholics were abstinent at the time of discharge. This study suggests that a severe abstinence syndrome, which was manifested by hypocholesterolemia, may occur in alcoholics who have been drinking heavily and have not been detoxified for at least six to nine months.Q: Transpose multiple rows to columns but with date columns as rows I'm looking for a solution to transpose data from multiple rows into multiple columns so that the date is a column and the remaining data is transposed as rows.
