What's New in the?

There is a new native import functionality in RAPIDMARKUP Import options. The function allows users to use the design feedback from a paper or PDF of your drawings to make modifications to your drawings. Previously, the user would use the RAPIDMARKUP application to create the markup and use another app to incorporate the feedback. Now, with the native functionality, users can import the data from a paper, PDF or web application right into the RAPIDMARKUP editor. You can create dynamic feedback pages and export them in a common PDF format that can be imported into a CAD application. Navigation of the “Insert” panel in RAPIDMARKUP: Now it is easier to navigate the Insert panel and make changes on the fly. You can change the size, geometry and placement of the menu items right in the panel, without the need to go to the “View” and “Drawing Tools” tab in the ribbon. The Insert panel provides a new functionality called “Edit All” that allows you to edit the settings of all the items in the panel at once. You can also update the text or the submenu items right in the panel. “Block to Edit” functionality: In AutoCAD 2023, users can edit the properties of individual objects in a drawing right on the block. With the new “Block to Edit” functionality in RAPIDMARKUP, users can now edit the properties of individual objects in a drawing. With this new capability, users can select an object in the drawing and edit the properties right on the block. You can edit any property on the object that is not enclosed in a command or custom block. The “Edit All” function can be used to edit all the properties of the selected objects in a drawing. One of the improvements that we have been receiving feedback on are the new commands that are added to the Standard toolbar and the New drawing panel. These commands provide users with the ability to create new objects using the different types of geometry, edit the appearance properties of an object, and create custom objects. There are now new commands in the Standard toolbar for creating new linear and custom objects. For example, there is a new command named “Create Linear Line (Line)” that allows you to create a new line object. You can also create new custom objects using the new commands in the Standard
